

SUSAN POPE PART TWO

The following Article is a follow up to the "Susan Pope" post to my documents. To be honest with you, as someone who honestly believes that most of the problems caused in this society in which we live is created by the powerful organizations such as the various "religious" organizations. Here is an unpaid endorsement to that affect. The world needs more white people like this, and less of those that choose to sit back and allow misdeeds to continue, so that they as white people can hold on to their comfortable stations in life, benefiting from the injustices. This is how I know through people like Susan that all catholic people won't be in hell. Thank you Susan Sarandon for choosing not to stay silent and comfortable. Thank you for standing up for what is right, against those things that are wrong, and not playing politics with peoples lives. May The Creator Continue to bless you with the love, understanding and courage you displayed. Muah!!! Love YOU more than fresh vegetables.. .

Susan Sarandon Explains Anger Behind Pope Outburst

Susan Sarandon is unapologetic about branding Pope Benedict XVI a "Nazi" last year, insisting she was angry at allegations the Catholic Church had protected pedophile priests. The Oscar-winner made the remarks at the Hamptons Film Festival, during which she recalled sending a copy of the book "Dead Man Walking" -- about Sister Helen Prejean's special relationship with death row prisoner Matthew Poncelet -- to Pope John Paul II.

Clarifying her story, she said, "The last one [Pope], not this Nazi one we have now." The star came under fire from Catholic leaders over her comments, but insists she was riled over claims of child abuse being covered up by those at the top of the church, especially as she has three children herself. She tells British newspaper the Guardian, "I find institutionalized religion very difficult, and for the most part non-productive. Jesus was amazing and a lot of what he talked about has been warped and used by many people to exclude others and be unloving. I consider myself a spiritual person."

What I said about this Pope was somewhat hostile because as a mother and a Catholic I've been very disappointed at the way that he has harbored pedophiles within the church. The church is so powerful that they have a responsibility and an opportunity to heal so many wrongs and instead they're so exclusive."
